

XM clarity is so superior that I have removed the antenna mast from my car. Their 'Instant Traffic and Weather' was therefore a very welcome addition to my available programming.

So I get my local programs at home (and I am a fan of local talk radio), but when I'm driving please let me enjoy both clean music and an occasional local traffic report, without having to switch between receivers.

Let the NAB compete fairly, and put money into improving their service, rather than into the pockets of lobbyists and legislators. When they speed up the upgrade to digital AM and FM, I will gladly be listening to broadcast radio again.

A free market is a fair market, and satellite radio is not the bully with an unfair advantage; satellite radio is the struggling little guy who's trying harder, and SUCCEEDING in giving the public what they want.
